

Thank you to everyone who auditioned. You made this incredibly hard to cast! It took me a week! Let me just say here how much I hate the process of casting. I love auditions and enjoy seeing everyone's potential and the blank slate of the show, but in casting it is emotional, there are feelings there of not giving people what they want (I very strongly feel this emotion in casting), in not working with people who I have enjoyed before, in missing out on someone's growth that I've never worked with, and absolutely everyone in between. For those not cast, this was simply not your show. I thank you for your time in auditions and even consideration in coming out and I would love to have a huge cast, but ultimately the space and the story I want us to tell cannot accommodate such a large cast. I want each show I'm involved in to be a fulfilling experience to those who I get to work with and sometimes that requires sacrifices. That does not lessen anyone's talent or worth, but in this show there was not space. So you have to make decisions. I am very excited about each of you in these parts and look forward to what you will bring in the specified role. I know we can all grow a little through this. I look forward to seeing you tonight at 5:00pm and we will be learning the remainder of The Wells Fargo Wagon. If you are not able to make it, please review the song and be sure to contact the FOA for your paperwork, script, and rehearsal schedule. If you are not already on Crew, please make sure you are added this week, so we can keep in contact with you through this process. See you tonight!
